This course focuses on refining students' performance skills and expanding their technical and interpretive abilities. Students will perform a selection of three pieces, chosen to reflect their growing expertise and present new technical and artistic challenges. This course emphasizes a deeper exploration of musical styles, with a particular focus on the Romantic and 20th-century repertoires. Students will engage in detailed analysis of their chosen works, examining aspects such as harmonic language, rhythmic complexities, and the evolution of expression. A key aspect of the course is the application of advanced performance techniques, including phrasing, dynamic contrast, and articulation, which will be developed through guided practice and critical feedback. In addition, students will learn a variety of scales and arpeggios in faster tempi, more complex patterns, challenging fingerings, dynamics, and shifts in register to enhance their technical agility and control. Performance workshops will support the development of stage presence, audience interaction, and mental preparation, while peer feedback and group discussions will foster a collaborative learning environment. By the end of the course, students will be expected to demonstrate improved technical proficiency, a more nuanced interpretation of their repertoire, and greater confidence in public performance. Credit hours: 2 Major Instrument 6 Course number: 2003312 Prerequisite: 2003311 This course marks a pivotal moment in the program, where students begin to shape their distinct artistic identity. They will select a set of thematically or stylistically unified pieces, focusing on the works of one or two specific composers or musical periods. Students are expected to choose their own repertoire of three pieces and articulate the reasoning behind their selections, whether based on personal affinity, technical challenge, or thematic exploration. A key focus of the course is advanced performance techniques, particularly ornamentation in Baroque and Classical music. Students will explore the stylistic nuances and historical context of ornamentation, deepening their interpretive skills and understanding of historical performance practices. In addition, students will learn new varieties of scales and arpeggios to further build on their technical skill development. Workshops will also be held to strengthen stage presence, mental preparation, and professional performance skills, including tools for managing performance anxiety and refining audience interaction. Additionally, students will explore different teaching methodologies to expand their perspective on music pedagogy and enhance their appreciation of the learning process, both as students and potential future educators. Credit hours: 2 Major Instrument 7 Course number: 2003411 Prerequisite: 2003312 This course prepares students for professional-level performance and public engagement. Students will perform a mini-recital featuring three distinct pieces, showcasing their strengths while addressing technical and musical challenges. These performances offer experience in concert preparation, stage presence, and delivery. Repertoire selection will be tailored to push each student's abilities further. Throughout the course, students will listen to various recordings and performances, engaging in discussions to refine their interpretations and broaden their artistic perspective. They will analyze differences in style and performance practices across musical schools, enhancing their interpretive skills. Additionally, students will actively listen to, analyze, and provide constructive feedback on their peers' performances, fostering а collaborative learning environment and developing skills in critical listening, mentorship, and performance coaching. Scales and arpeggios will continue to be practiced, with an emphasis on integrating them seamlessly into the overall performance. Vocal 1-7 Prerequisite Course title Course number: Credit hours

These courses aim to develop students' individual vocal performance skills through training in fundamental vocal techniques, breath control, rhythm, and pitch accuracy. Students choose between Arabic singing or Western singing, focusing on the techniques and cultural nuances of each style.

Western

Students perform pieces from various musical periods, including Classical, Romantic, and Contemporary. Training emphasizes proper breathing, pitch control, vocal dynamics, and artistic interpretation of Western music. Students enhance their ability to express themselves vocally in accordance with Western styles.

Arabic

Students focus on solo performances of Arabic music, including forms such as muwashahat, taqatiq, and folk songs. Training highlights Arabic maqamat (modal structures), improvisation, and expressive vocal techniques unique to Arabic music, reflecting its cultural and stylistic characteristics.

Each level concludes with an individual performance assessment, demonstrating the student's progress and mastery of chosen style (Arabic or Western). Students showcase their technical, interpretive, and expressive growth through selected repertoire appropriate to their skill level.

Credit hours: 1	Graduation Project (Performance)	Course number: 2033418
Prerequisite: Major Ins	trument (6) - 2003312

This course culminates in a public graduation recital, during which students present a music recital showcasing the comprehensive skills and artistic proficiency developed throughout the program. The recital includes high-level, technically demanding pieces spanning various musical forms and historical periods, highlighting the performer's technical capabilities, expressive abilities, and interpretation of the era each piece represents. Intensive rehearsals in a concert-like environment are held to ensure a polished and refined performance, which is evaluated by a specialized committee. Following the recital, students participate in a discussion session with their instructors and audience, where they receive constructive feedback and reflect on their achievements. This experience celebrates their progress and prepares them for the launch of their professional careers as musicians.
